The double header yesterday caused the worst double headache to the Indianapolis people who sat through the eighteen innings and witnessed the slaughter of the Indianapolis aggregation that they have ever experienced. The term "Indians" has been applied to the Indianapolis team, but they were decided "pale faces" when all was over and the score board set out in big figures that Cleveland had taken both contests. In each game the visitors made just two more than the Hoosiers. The firs score resulted 4 to 2 and the second 6 to 4.

The two games demonstrated withou any reasonable doubt that the men from the shores of Lake Erie could break bette than even with the Indianapolis men. Dur ing the latter part of the second game well known fan, who has been away par of the summer sat in the stand and rubbe his head persistently, every minute or pulling out a tuft of hair. He said he wa tired trying to understand the hypnoti spell cast over the Hoosiers when the met Cleveland and would go in search o Belgian hares as he understood the busi ness was very profitable. He was not th only one who could not work out a solu tion of the problem. About the best argu ment raised was that Cleveland played better game than Indianapolis and con bined luck with their efforts to add their run-getting and in preventing the Hoosiers from sending tallies across the

CRITICISED THE UMPIRE. Raising objections to the work of the umpire seldom avails anything other than to vent one's feelings and during the two games the spectators and Indianapolis players surely spoke out what they thought about the work of Umpire Dwyer, who gave Cleveland the largest slice of the Errors adorned the score books in profusion, being hung in festoons around the names of Hickey, Magoon, Shay and several others. This sort of decoration was not pleasing to the eye and furthermore was disastrous, as the errors piled up by the Hoosiers were costly. Cleveland made errors galore, but on a few occasions the errors proved to be very lucky for them and disastrous for Indianapolis. In the second game Hickey played blindman's buff with the ball and booted and juggled

It as if he had eleomargarine on his fingers. The greatest weakness of the Hoosiers, however, was a woeful lack of batting. ocating the sphere as it sped toward the plate was a business with which they seemed to be entirely unfamiliar, and in the two games they only placed the ball in safe territory thirteen times, only four of the hits coming in the first game, ludging from the score, one might say the Cleveland players were heartless in the first battle, but this is not true, as there was a very big Hart in the game for them, as he was the stumbling block. His curves were an enigma which the Hoosier batsmen could not solve. He had them on his staff -yea, in his grip-at all stages, and the two runs that were forced across the plate were the result of errors behind him. Kellum was on the slab for Indianapolis, and his work was also noteworthy, but he had a better lot of aerial artists behind him. who ascended high into the air at critical

FIRST TO SCORE. Indianapolis was the first to score in the opening contest. The run came in the second inning. Magoon bounced a ball in the infield and he ran to first faster than he was ever known to cover the distance. beating the ball to the initial bag. Magoon fanned out and Madison's hit scored Hartsel. Madison started to steal second. Crisham threw to Hart, and Geler, not noticing where the ball was sent, came on home, only to meet Crisham with the ball and be tagged out. In the fifth Indianapolis came near to scoring, but that was all, as a double play took away all chances. The sixth inning witnessed the Cleveland eam tie the score. Genins was disposed of, but the others who followed him were not such "easy picking." Lachance reached first on an infield hit. This was followed by a very bad error by Magoen. The error allowed Lachance to reach third and Flood second. Shay scored them with a single. The Hoosiers made an assignment in the scoring business and did not reach home plate again during the game, while in the ighth Cleveland made a couple, winning the game. Lachance went out in that inting, and then Flood singled. Shay followed with a safe hit. There was a double steal, on which Powers made a wild throw, allowing Flood to score and Shay to reach third. Crisham flew out, sending Shay across the plate. The Hoosiers were easy

the Hoosiers were animated instead of being automatons, he did not have much show of winning his game. After two were out in the first inning Hickey started what proved to be his worst day of the season by fumbling Genins's grounder, allowing the runner to reach second. Hogriever witnessed the downward course of Lachance's fly, and he was so thrilled with the picture he allowed the ball to slip through his hands and repose on the ground while Genins scored. Flood then went out Hogriver dispatched one to safe territory and Harrsel walked. Geier beat out a bunt, filling the bags. Then Magoon drove one to Flood. Hogriever being caught at the plate. Madison scored Hartsel and Geler with a single, on which Magoon advanced to third. Kelly flew out, Magoon scoring. A bunch of misplays gave Cleveland two in the second. One man crossed the rubber for Indianarolis in the last of the second fining Gardner flew out and Hogriever again singled. Hartsel hit safely, and a double steal resulted. A passed ball allowed Hog-riever to score. Geler hit to Shay, and Hartsel was caught at the plate. Geler attempted a robbery, but was caught in the act. No more runs were scored by the Hooslers, although several opportunities were offered, but the necessary hit did not show up.

In the fifth Cleveland tied the score. Frisbie singled and Genins sacrificed him to second. Lachance hit to Madison, who threw to Hickey to catch Frisbie, but the tuttered fingers of Hickey allowed the sphere to slip out of his hands. Lachance was forced out and Frisbie scored. Cleveland won in the seventh with a brace of runs. After Frisbie flew to Hartsel Hickey added another error to his bunch by fumcling Genins's grounder. Lachance then hit for three bases, scoring Genins. The ball was thrown in, and when Gardner threw to Heydon his effort proved bad and Lachance scored. The score:

Errors Aided Chicago. MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Aug. 11.-Chicago won again to-day, making all its runs in the first and third innings, mostly off errors by the home team. After the third, both sides played good ball. The line-up of the home team was changed all around, which mixed matters at the start. # BIG MACHINES ARRIVING.

The Races Tuesday Night Will Eclipse All Others.

The big machines which will participate in the races at Newby Oval next Tuesday evening are arriving in the city, and many of them are working out on the track. Lon Sackett, of Boston, arrived yesterday with the Waltham flyer, and the imperial triplet team came in on the same train. Mr. Sackett's machine is different from other styles of motors, and he has made quite a reputation with it, having competed in nine races and won them all. He won the Boston to Waltham and return race, covering the twenty-five miles in 50:04.

The Indiana made ten miles at the track This trial was made on the top of the bank ing. On account of the large number of machines in the ten-mile event it will be necessary for the motors to ride high on the banks. Human propelled machines will have an advantage of about fourteen secends on each mile on account of the extra distance the motors will cover. Hughes and Davis, the speedy Terre Haute tandem team, wired their entires yesterday afternoon. The lists are now all filled, as the Oval will not stand the addition of any more machines or riders. The advance sale of seats is very large, and the management expects the largest crowd at the races that ever gathered at Newby Oval. Seats are on sale at Huder's drug

TO GET RICH QUICKLY.

Invent Something for the Use of the

New Orleans Times-Democrat. "If you want to get rich quickly," said a local inventor, "just think of something new and practical in military appliances, arms or munitions. An American mechanic received $60,000 from the German government the other day for a very simple shell extractor. Quite recently the French paid over $100,000 for an improvement in recoil cylinders for field artillery, and I could name a dozen other instances out of hand. In this connection," he went on, "I don't mind giving a small tip. One of the things greatly desired at present is some better type of fixed ammunition for rapid-fire guns. Fixed ammunition, you know, is simply a cartridge, in which the projectile and explosive are handled in one piece. For guns up to, say, four or five-inch caliber, these cartridges are all right, with one exception, and that is the nuisance of extracting the empty case after firing. Under any circumstances that takes time, and frequently the shell sticks in the breech and the gun is temporarily thrown out of action. What I would suggest, and what I have been experimenting with to some extent, is a powder charge pressed into the form of a solid cylinder and attached in some manner to the base of the projectile, Earned runs-Minneapolis, 1; Chicago, 1. dispensing altogether with the case. Smokeshapes-cubes, sticks and so on-and there is no reason why the entire charge couldn't be made in one piece. How to fasten it to the shell is a question, but that might be accomplished by wooden pegs or rods, which would be blown to atoms in the discharge. Anyhow, it's worth thinking about. Of course, the powder cylinder should be honey-combed with small perforations, to insure quick combustion, and the advantages of such ammunition would be great. To begin with, there would be no metal case to remove, and the gun after each discharge would be entirely empty and ready for another load. That would add several seconds to the rapidity of fire and do away with the danger of 'sticking.' Then, again, it would lighten the ammunition chest by two or three hundred pounds, and, lastly,

such cartridges would be much cheaper than the present form. The cases now used are made of either brass or copper and cost

Audience Expecting Mark Twain Is Ready to Applaud Everything.

Everybody's Magazine. In the town of Colchester, Conn., there was a good illustration of this, the Hon. Demshain Hornet having a most unpleasant experience at the expense of Mark Twain. Mr. Clemens was advertised to lecture in the town of Colchester, but for some reason failed to arrive. In emergency the lecture committee decided to employ Mr. Hornet to deliver his celebrated lecture on temperance, but so late in the day was this arrangement made that no bills announcing it could be circulated, and the audience assembled, expecting to hear Mark Twain. No one in the town knew Mr. Clemens, or had ever heard him he was funny, and went to the lecture prepared to laugh. Even those upon the platform, excepting the chairman, did not know Mr. Hornet from Mark Twain, and when he was introduced, thought nothing of the name, as they knew "Mark Twain" was a pen-name, and supposed his real name was Hornet Mr. Hornet bowed politely, looked about him, and remarked: "Intemperance is the curse of the country." The audience burst into a merry laugh. He knew it could not

The men on the platform, except the chairman, squirmed as they laughed. Then Hornet got mad. "What I say is gospel truth," he cried. The audience fairly bellowed with mirth. Hornet turned to a man on the stage, and said: "Do you see anything very ridiculous in my remarks or behavior? 'Yes, ha, ha! It's intensely funny-ha, ha ha! Go on!" replied the roaring man. "This is an insult," cried Hornet, wildly dancing about. More laughter, and cries of, "Go on, Twain!" Then the chairman began to see through a glass darkly, and arose and quelled the merriment, and explained the situation, and the men on the stage suddenly ceased laughing, and the folks in the he had never before got into a town so entirely populated with asses and idiots, and having said that, he left the hall in dis-

Taylor Comes to Meet Vardon. NEW YORK, Aug. 11 .- J. H. Taylor, the champion golf player, was a passenger on the Cunard line steamship Etruria, which arrived here to-night. Taylor comes here to meet the crack players of this side and possibly to try conclusions here with Vardon, the former champion. He was met by his partner, G. H. Cann, of Pittsburg. When Vardon first came to America he held the title of championship of the world, but on his return to England some months ago he was defeated by Taylor.

Games at Southampton. NEW YORK, Aug. 11.-The revival of the Long island lawn tennis championship tournament at Southampton was brought to a close this afternoon on the courts of the Meadow Club, with the series of English-American matches. Two matches were played in the singles and one in the double. A. W. Gore, the English expert, won his contest over Richard Stevens in the singles, but the Americans captured the other two matches, W. A. Larned winning over E. D. Black in singles, and Robert Wrenn and Ollie E. Campbell gaining a victory in the doubles over Gore and Black, who were paired for this event. Stevens went down hard before the fast play of Gore. The American could not stand against the powerful force of the Englishman's long hard drives. In the two sets of the match Stevens was only able to earn nine of his points. On the other hand, Gore earned twenty points of his score by clever placing and passes. Larned, the veteran American, performed brilliantly against Black. He defeated the English crack in straight sets, and, though the play was close in the last set, Larned pulled out because of his superior style and accuracy. The peculiar feature of the contest was that both players earned exactly seventeen points of their scores. The team work of Gore and Black in the loubles was very ragged. They were not used to playing together, and their poor showing against Wrenn and Campbell is due to this. The Englishmen volleyed well at the net, and in nearly every game the points went to deuce and vantage. Wrenn and Campbell's clever passes along the alley of the opposing courts were well done, and proved the undoing of the Britons. English-American singles: A. W. Gore beat Richard Stevens, 6-1, 6-1; W. A. Larned beat E. D. Black, 6-1, 6-3. English-American doubles: R. D. Wrenn and Ollie Campbell beat A. W. Gore and E. D. Black, 6-4, 6-4.

"The cunning of the Chinese has been very much exaggerated," said a former sea captain in conversation the other day. was in the Hong-Kong trade for several years, where I was compelled to make a pretty close study of the native charache continued, "and I soon found out that the stories of their phenomenal astuteness were mostly rubbish. It is true that the average Chinese business man will generally overreach European newcomers, but it isn't through any superior finesse or intelligence-it is by plain, straight-out lying. That is something the European isn't prepared for, and until he learns the ropes he can't believe that a wealthy, dignified merchant of high social and commercial rank will tell him a deliberate, premeditated falsehood. As a rule it requires several sharp lessons to get that fact into his head. I will never forget my own first experience. We had arranged with a prominent Chinese merchant of Hong-Kong for a quantity of tea, but at the last minute there was a hitch about the delivery of the consignment. He told me it had been temporarily tied up by the officials on account of some misunderstanding about the internal taxes. I discovered by accident, later on, that the lot had been sold over my head to a chance customer, and the tax story was a mere pretext to gain time for the substitution of an inferior grade The tea merchant was a sedate, courtly old gentleman, and he had told me this outrageous lie with perfect calmness, looking me squarely in the face, without a quiver It never occurred to me to doubt his word and, but for a chance, we would have been heavy losers. When I exposed him, indignantly, before all his employes and several foreign residents I supposed he would be ashamed and disconcerted. An American of his standing would have been humiliated and crushed beyond measure. I have known men to commit suicide for less disgrace, but he never so much as blinked. He heard me through blandly, made no comment and began to talk about something else. He had told a lie, was caught and

When a European trader tells a lie, and, I am sorry to say, plenty of them do, it is usually some complicated fabrication that will leave him a loophole for explanation in the event of detection; but a Chinaman takes no such pains. He confines himself to a plain, bald misstate-ment of fact, which is rather staggering to one who is accustomed to believe that men of large affairs can't afford to deliberately deceive. But, after the situation in that respect is understood, the American never has any trouble holding his own with the Oriental. On the contrary, he gets the best of nine deals out of ten. Without exception they enjoy a reputation for absolute truth and reliability. A wholesaler on Magazine street who sells large quantities of soap and starch to a Chinese firm near the police headquarters remarked to me recently that they were the most factory customers on his books, because he could place implicit confidence in anything they told him. It is the same all over the country. You will never hear of a Chinaman swindling a creditor, defaulting an obligation or being involved in any trouble through misrepresentation. So I am inclined to attribute the crookedness of the Chinaman at home to the national atmosphere of duplicity and deceit. Double dealing is so universal over there that it is simply taken for granted, and when a native really desires to communicate a fact he is obliged to twist it wrong end to,

In the ferry houses, both in New York and Jersey, there are two or three of these drop-apenny-in-the-slot-and-get-your-weight machines. Some of them tell your fortune as well, but that's just to catch the women. The men don't care. They are just as idiotic about finding out how much they weigh as the women are, but they would just as lief be weighed on one machine as another. Not so with the women. If just a weight machine and fortune-telling machine are side by side the women all tackle the latter. They get more for their money which appeals to the sex peculiarly, as then the prophecy of good luck of one kind or another which is always handed out catches the innate mysticism in their character. They never try the simple weight machine unless they are very fat or very thin. The very fat ones try the secon scales in the hope that it will register one pound less, and the very thin ones in the hope that it will register one pound more.
